Vivo Resorts & Residences Gives Back to the Local Community Through Its Vivo Foundation

Vivo Resorts & Residences is continuing to strengthen its Vivo Foundation by giving back to the community through various educational programs and environmental conservation initiatives.

Vivo Resorts & Residences, a luxury oceanfront resort and real estate development in Puerto Escondido, continues to strengthen its Vivo Foundation. This foundation is devoted to making a difference by being a respected and contributing neighbor committed to giving back to the community through various educational programs and environmental conservation initiatives.

The Vivo Foundation serves as a vehicle for Vivo Resorts' members and colleagues to make their unique contributions and grow the sense of community.

Recently the Vivo Foundation in conjunction with a Vivo Resorts owner, opened an English learning center in the town Chila, only 10 minutes from the resort. The classes are free of charge to Chila residents and Vivo Resorts employees' children. The program has had great success and continues to grow in popularity, around 40 children attend the two-hour classes.

"Throughout the year, it is important for us at the Vivo Foundation to support the community surrounding us and give back to those in need. Our mission is to be the best neighbors we can be. The Vivo Foundation serves as a vehicle for Vivo Resorts' members and colleagues to make their unique contributions and grow the sense of community," said Cary Mullen, President and Founder of Vivo Resorts.

The Vivo Foundation also contributes to ecological initiatives such as the Palmarito Turtle Camp, a local organization dedicated to gather newly-laid turtle eggs and care for them at a turtle farm located about a 30-minute walk along the beach from the resort. Once the eggs hatch, a member of the organization brings the hatchlings to Vivo, where guests can take part in an educational presentation and then proceed to guide the turtles to the sea. To date, this organization has saved over 300,000 sea turtles.
